

1. Brave Pari

There was a girl named Pari. One day, she was going to her friend's house. Suddenly, she saw a dog. Pari got scared.

She looked around, but no one was there. Pari decided to be brave and not afraid.

The dog started coming closer. Pari stayed quiet and kept walking forward. The dog sniffed her and wagged its tail.

Pari realized that the dog would not harm her because it was happy. She remembered her father saying, "A dog wags its tail when it is happy."

Now, Pari walked ahead without fear, and the dog followed her. Soon, she reached her friend Neena's house. Pari told Neena the story of her bravery.

2. What's there to be ashamed of ?

Mohan was studying in class 2. He was very shy. He had a friend named Dinesh, who also studied in the same class. They both talked a lot.

One day, they were having an exam. Dinesh was sitting next to Mohan. Mohan started feeling the urge to go to the bathroom. He tried very hard to hold it in, but the pain kept increasing. He quietly told Dinesh, and Dinesh suggested he tell the teacher. The teacher noticed them talking and scolded them, saying, "Dinesh-Mohan, no talking!"

But Mohan's pain kept increasing, and he couldn't tell the teacher. Finally, just as he was about to tell her, his pants got soiled. All the children started laughing loudly. The teacher asked, "What happened, Mohan?" Mohan told her everything.

The teacher explained to the children, saying, "What's there to laugh about? Everyone can need the toilet or feel sick anytime. There is no shame in saying it. Both kids and adults go to the toilet, and sometimes, because of an upset stomach, one may need to go several times a day.

There's no shame in talking about it." Mohan and the other children understood this very well.

3. Friendship with Darkness

In a small village, there lived a little boy named Rohan who was very scared of the dark. As soon as night fell, he would run to his mother out of fear.

One day, Rohan's grandmother called him and said, "Rohan, do you know that darkness can be your storytelling friend?"

Rohan curiously asked, "Darkness and a friend? How is that, Grandma?"

His grandmother smiled and replied, "When everything becomes quiet and darkness surrounds us, the moon and stars come out to show us that there's always light hidden behind the dark. If you close your eyes and listen carefully, the breeze and the rustling leaves will tell you their stories."

That night, Rohan gathered his courage and stayed alone in the dark. He closed his eyes and listened. He heard the gentle sound of the wind, which seemed to say, "Don't be afraid, I'm here with you." The leaves rustled softly and added, "We're singing a lullaby for you."

Slowly, Rohan realized that there was nothing to fear in the dark. It was, in fact, the beginning of a new friendship. From then on, Rohan slept fearlessly and listened to the stories of his new friends in the dark.

4. Theft - Bad Habit

Vikas and Aman were good friends. One day, they were working in their classroom when Aman stepped out to use the washroom. While Aman was away, Vikas decided to hide his new pencil.

When Aman returned and couldn't find his pencil, he asked Vikas about it. Vikas lied and said, "I don't have it." Aman became upset because he knew his mother would scold him for losing the pencil. Trying to figure out what happened, Aman asked, "Did you take the pencil to the washroom by mistake?" Aman replied, "No, I left it right here."

Aman decided to tell the teacher about the missing pencil. The teacher started checking the bags of students sitting near Aman. Just as it was Aman's turn, the school bell rang for dismissal. Since the pencil wasn't found, the teacher asked Aman to bring a new pencil the next day.

As Vikas and Aman were walking home, Aman's eyes filled with tears. He was worried about getting scolded by his mother. Vikas felt very bad for what he had done. He said, "Aman, I need to tell you something, but promise you won't tell anyone."

Aman nodded and said, "Okay, I won't. What is it?"

Vikas admitted, "I was the one who hid your pencil. Here it is. Please don't tell anyone. I shouldn't have done it."

Aman replied, "Alright, I won't tell anyone, but only if you promise never to steal or lie again." Vikas agreed, and from that day on, he never stole or lied again. His friendship with Aman grew even stronger.

5. Remember personal things

Aman went to the fair with his family. The fair was very crowded. He was holding his brother's hand tightly, but due to the crowd, they got separated. Aman was scared and couldn't find anyone after looking ahead. His family started searching for him.

Aman didn't know what to do and began calling out, "Mommy! Mommy!" loudly, but the fair was too noisy. Then, he noticed a policeman nearby.

Aman gathered courage and explained everything to him. The policeman asked for his family's phone number, but Aman couldn't recall any. When asked for his home address, Aman didn't remember it clearly either.

The policeman kindly explained that if Aman knew such information, he could reunite with his family quickly. Then, the policeman took Aman to the fair's help desk and made an announcement using a loudspeaker.

After some time, Aman's family heard the announcement and came to the help desk. They hugged Aman joyfully, and everything was fine again.
