

6. Irfan's Honesty

Irfan went to a shop with his friend Sahil to buy a notebook. The shop was busy. The shopkeeper gave him a notebook for 30 rupees. Irfan gave the shopkeeper 50 rupees, but the shopkeeper returned 70 rupees by mistake. Irfan was confused but noticed the shopkeeper was busy with other customers.

Outside the shop, Irfan told Sahil about it. Sahil was excited and said, "Wow, that's lucky! Maybe the shopkeeper thought you gave him 100 rupees. Let's use this money to buy something to eat." But Irfan felt bad and said, "We should never keep someone's hard-earned money, even by mistake."

Sahil asked, "What should we do then?" Irfan took Sahil back to the shop. He explained the mistake to the shopkeeper and returned the extra money. The shopkeeper was very happy and gave them each a pencil as a reward. Both friends went home feeling very happy.

7. Meena's proud

Meena was a student in Class 5. She always came first in her class and was very proud of it. She often complained to the teacher about small issues, causing other children to get scolded or punished. She enjoyed doing this.

The only person better than her in drawing was Deepak, who lived in her neighborhood. Meena didn't like him for this. One day, there was a drawing competition. Deepak was sitting next to her, making a drawing that turned out better than Meena's. Seeing this, Meena became annoyed. She pretended to fall and spilled colors on Deepak's drawing. Deepak felt very bad, but Meena apologized, and he forgave her.

The next day, Meena accidentally fell down the stairs at home and broke her leg. The doctor advised her not to go to school for a month. Deepak came to visit her at home and talked to her kindly. Meena said, "Exams are after a month. How will I pass?" Deepak reassured her, saying, "Don't worry. I will help you with all the schoolwork."

Hearing this, Meena felt very guilty about her actions. She started crying and confessed the truth about spoiling his drawing. Deepak said, "It's okay, but don't do such things to anyone else." He helped Meena with her studies, and Meena again came first in the exams. From then on, Meena became friendly with everyone and lived happily.

8. The Stranger's Greed

Riya loved chocolates. One day, she was playing in the street with her friends when a man came in a car. He asked all the children, "Who likes chocolates?"

Everyone said yes. He then said, "Come to my car, I have lots of chocolates." Except for Riya, no one went near the car. As soon as Riya got into the car, she asked, "Uncle, where are the chocolates?"

The man said they were at his house. When Riya refused to go, he quickly locked the door and started the car. Riya screamed loudly. Hearing her cries, a neighbor uncle came running. He stopped the car and questioned the man.

It turned out that the man was a thief. Together, everyone handed him over to the police.

9. Monu's Habit

Monu was 10 years old and loved dancing. He was the best dancer in his school. However, he had a habit of keeping his room messy. Clothes and toys were always scattered everywhere, and he never kept them in the right place. Even though his mother repeatedly asked him to clean up, he didn't listen.

One day, there was a dance competition at his school. Monu was very excited. On the day of the competition, he woke up early, took a quick bath, and threw the towel on the floor. After getting ready, as he was about to leave, his foot got tangled in the towel, and he fell hard on the floor.

He hurt his shoulder and cried out in pain. His family rushed to him and took him to the clinic. The doctor said his shoulder bone was dislocated and needed to be plastered. Monu couldn't participate in the competition anymore.

Monu felt very bad about his habit. From that day onwards, he started putting everything back in its proper place after using it.

10. Rahul's Kindness

Rahul was a kind-hearted boy who loved helping others. One day, while walking home from school, he saw an old man sitting by the roadside. The man looked tired, hungry, and his clothes were torn. Rahul approached him and asked gently, "Are you okay, uncle?"

The man replied, "I haven't eaten for two days, son. I have no money and no one to help me."

Rahul felt sad. He thought for a moment and decided to help. He ran to a nearby shop and bought some food and water with the little pocket money he had saved. He returned to the old man and handed him the food.

The man's eyes filled with tears. "Thank you, my child. You are very kind," he said with a smile.

Rahul didn't stop there. He went home and told his parents about the old man. His parents were proud of his compassion and gave him some old clothes and a blanket to give to the man. Rahul happily took them to the old man.

The man blessed Rahul, saying, "May you always be happy and successful in life."

From that day, Rahul decided to always help those in need whenever he could.
